Everybody has had some kind of an experience that they relate to with CFLs. Our family is no exception. One of us hears a buzz or a flicker and blames it on the light bulb. I think its fair to say that the light is perhaps not the same quality as the incandescent bulb. They contain mercury which we all know is a hazard. Im told though that better technology exists, and while the standard light bulb that we know and love may soon be phased out, there are new products that are strikingly similar to the old ones and have the added benefit of saving electricity. So Im looking forward to hearing what our witnesses have today and the robust debate that we will have over our lighting efficiency. Thank you. The Chairman. Thank you very much. For the record at this point...
